THE PROJECT

Alef Beta Polyclinic is a four-storey office building rising in Agia Zoni, fifty metres from Agia Polyclinic – a location chosen deliberately, not incidentally. Six units are laid out across the four floors: two smaller offices each on the first and second floors, and two full-floor clinics on the third and fourth, giving practices the choice of a compact suite or an entire level to configure as their own.

Floating floors run through every unit, built to carry the cabling and plumbing a modern clinic needs without visible retrofitting. A ground-floor lobby with reception and two elevators handle arrival and circulation, parking is built into the site, and a rooftop terrace tops the building – a modern, modular structure designed for the practice of medicine, not adapted to it.

DESIGN & CRAFTSMANSHIP

Designed by Neofytos Lemonaris – a modular medical office building built around floating floors and a rooftop terrace, fifty metres from Agia Polyclinic.
